Paid Them Out of the Principal, According to the Police, and Pocketed the Rest-Opened Shop in December, Shut Up in April-To He Brought Back Here.

Dr. Hans Hogelsberg, who has been arrested or Los Angeles charged with the larceny of 100 from Ernest S. May, a hotel and restsurant keeper at 50 West Twenty-eighth street, this city, was the sole stockholder and all the officers but one of the "Investors' Guarantee and Trust Company," whose offices were opened last December in Lord's Court, 40 Exchange place. On the stationery of the concern Hogelsberg was the President, a man called R. C. Lungren was the Treasurer, and the com pany was incorporated under the laws of West Virginia with a capital of $1,000,000.

Having opened offices, Hogelsberg used the mails to been his enterprise. His advertise-ments stated that his company had been organized to do a commission business in stocks bonds, grain and provisions, and to invest moner in such a way that the investor would get wonderful returns, and that the results of nvestments made by the company were "al most mathematically certain." Hogelsberg sent his circulars all over the country, especally to Chicago, St. Louis, Louisville, Kansas City, San Francisco and Los Angeles.

Plenty of credulous persons sent money t m to invest, in small sums at first. According to the advertisements interest on invest ments was payable monthly and patrons of the company were to share in the dividends on the company's stock. According to the police, Hogeisterg took out of each consignment of money he received and sent back to the investor a sum equivalent to interest at the rate of 1 per cent, or 2 per cent, a month on the amount sent for investment and put the rest in his pocket. Such procedure almost always brought an acknowledgment from the investor, with more money to be invested. On Dec. 23, 1898, Hegisburg sent out a circular to his customers stating that the total profits paid to stockholders in 1838 had been 251 per cent, on the amount invested. On March 22 last another circular was sent out stating that the "Board of Directors had declared a dividend of 1 per cent on the "preferred stock" for the month of March, and that the "special sentings" for that mouth to investors were 14 per cent, net on the amount invested.

May gave Hogelsberg $3,000, with orders to buy 321 shares of the preferred stock of the United States Rubber Company. The $3,000 was Mars marrin. The stock was bought, May says, at 101, and by his orders sold on April II last at 118. About that time Hogelsbergshut upshop and disappeared, and instead of paying May his $8,100 sent him a circular explaining that all was lost, and concluding:

Twas a fool to think I could beat the market and make a fortune for you and me, but you will hardly be more successful. You lose only a few dollars, while I lose my very existence.

May reported the case to Capt, McClusky, investor a sum equivalent to interest at only a lew dollars while I lose by very existence.

May reported the case to Capt. McClusky, and Hogelsberg was traced to Los Angeles and arrested. Capt. McClusky said resterday that a friend of May's named Young had been eaught for more than double the amount May had lost, and that a great number of working girls and clerks had also been caught. McClusky said that he believed Hogelsberg had got as much as $100,000 out of his customers.
He will be brought here.

HIPPOCAMPUS HUDSONIUS.

The Wonderful Little Marine Creature Commonly Known as the Seaherse.

William E. Damon read on Friday evening before the New York Microscopical Society a paper on the seahorse (Hippocampus Hudson-ius), the wonderful little marine animal with a head and neck bearing a striking resemblance to the head and neck of the horse, while its tail is prehensile, like that of a monkey. Mr. Damon exhibited a photograph of a seahorse which he had kept alive in his own aquarium for a year and a half. This seahorse was very tame, and would readily take food from its owner's hand. The seahorse is fond of the little crustacean gammarus, and it likes also small shrimps broken in two, so that it can the more readily get at the meat in them. Nature has provided the seahorse with a suction apparatus in its mouth wherewith it takes in its food. When a broken shrimp was held between the fingers under water for the seahorse to eat, with a finger exended below, the seahorse would come up and twine its tall around the extended finger and, holding on by that, suck the meat from the shell with a little smacking sound as it took it in, emptying the shell at once. Then it would let go with its tail and take a turn around the tank and come back for more. While the senhorse is marvellously like the horse in appearance, it is like it in appearance only. It has a valvular mouth instead of one of the ordinary form, and that part of the seahorse shead which seems to be the jaw is, in fact, the respiratory apparatus or gills. The nostrik, instead of being at the end of the snout, are really close below the eves. The two earlike projections and the one along the back which might be likened to the mane are the saring projections and the one along the back which might be likened to the mane are the fish's fins.

With most fishes the tail is the chief organ of prepulsion. The seahorse's tail has the same bony and muscular structure as that of other fishes, but it does not end in a fin; it is projenged far backward and has a free vertical movement, unlike that of the tails of most fishes, which have lateral motion only. The seahorse's tail is not used as an organ of propulsion at all; it is generally carried in a curve or coll directed downward. The seahorse propels itself by means of the fin upon its back, which it waves with a peculiar undulating, screw-like motion. With this fin, however, the seahorse is enabled to move through the waves quite rapidly, which it does with an even gliding motion. The seahorse uses its prehensile tail as the monkey does; it attaches itself often by its tail to seaweed and other floating substances.

uses its prehensile tail as the monkey does; it attaches itself often by its tail to seaweed and other floating substances.

The seahurse alone, with one other existing fish, the gar pike of our Western rivers, possesses the power which was common to many of the older fishes, that of turning its head independently of its body. The seahorse can also turn its eyes in almost any direction.

The young of the seahorse are produced from eggs, which when about matured are taken into and carried and protected in a double fold of skia, hot upon the body of the female seahorse, by which they have been spawned, but upon the body of the male seahorse, by which they have been spawned, but upon the body of the male seahorse may be seen at the breeding aeason with this pouch full of the young. There were submitted for examination, under the microscope mounted specimens of seahorses two or three days old, a male and a female, tiny little creatures each about a quarter of an inch in length.

FORD ON HIS FRANCHISE TAX.

He Says There'll Be a Cry of "Sell Short!" When the Corporations Understand It. Senator John Ford delivered an address last night at Cooper Union, before the People's Institute, on the Franchise Tax bill. The method of taxing corporations outlined in my bill," he said, " is without precedent in the United States, but I venture to say it will be a precedent for every State. And I venture say that the attorneys of the corporations haven't waked up to the possibilities of the bil yet. They will, however, and you'll see the stocks of these corporations going down. There will he a cry of 'Sell short' when it cames to the Metropolitan, the Third Avenue read Consolidated Gas and other such stocks. It isn't hard to assess such property as public franchises. There is a dial at the Stock Exchange that will tell you what every franchise is worth any day."

PLUCKY CAPTAIN "JIMMIR" DEAD. Although Maimed and Half Blind He Made

NEW LONDON, Conn., May 4,-"I see Capt. limmie' Dodge over on Black Island is dead," said Amasa Barlow, a well-known Government contractor and breakwater builder, this morning. "I don't suppose that a braver life was ever lived than his," be continued. "Uncle Jimmie was the veteran and cheery voiced fisherman over there who, one-legged, one-eyed and one-armed, was better known to thousands of summer people. I've no doubt, than any other resident of the State of Rhode Island. "Uncle Jimmie for more than forty years had been the favorite guide to the island fishing grounds, and as a weather sharp, why, he was simply immense! Everybody used to go to Uncle Jimmy for weather, and if he said it was going to blow great guns or rain pitchforks the next day you couldn't get a woman to leave the beach for the next twenty-four hours. And don't you think any other way All the women believed in Uncle Jimmie.

"He took me up to his house while I was over there last summer. He had one of the preftiest places on the island, just filled with all sorts of memeatos and gifts of one kind and another from well-known men who had the women, too. His dry sailor talk, his salt water wisdom and his expert seamanship won general admiration for him. Uncle Jimmie was always partial to the 'ladies,' as he called them. Millionaires and Supreme Court Judges counted for little with him when he had a party of women fishermen aboard of his fishing craft. He liked nothing better than a

"No one to look at the half-blinded,"bent. maimed and grizzled old fisherman could say much for his personal comeliness, but his qualities as a good sallor man, his pleasing manners and the story of his life's nlucky struggle won for him plenty of friends. When he was only 18 years old, I believe, in an evil moment he went 'off island' to work in a conton mill. His young wife went with him. In a few days he was caught in a whirling shaft and drawn with the rapidity of lightning three times about a pulley and hurled to the floor in a mangled heap. When taken up one of his eyes was found sightless, his right arm torn off at the elbow and one of his legs crushed and broken. He was given up 'as dead, but finally his physique triumphed and he recovered. Then, a badly battered specimen of humanity, but not disheartened, he returned to the Island to win for himself a living in a fishing beat, on the safe salt water,' as he used to say, an occupation requiring an unusual degree of physical strength.

"He learned to manage a boat and to fish with one hand, and he finally became such an expert fisherman and pilot that the other islanders looked upon him as a most desirable partner in their ventures. Uncle Jimmie would match his prowess as an angler against any two-handed fisherman salling out of Block Island Basin. It is a matter of record over there that on one occasion he caught 253 bluesish alone with his one hand and the stump of an arm, managing his boat in the meantime.

"The summer guests discovered Uncle Jimmie source and by his industry in winter fishing Unile Jimmie, despite his criopled condition, which would have discouraged an ordinary man, achieved a anug competency before he died. He reared a family of six children, too, and he lived to see some of the finest craft sailing from Block Island ewned and commanded by his sons." much for his personal comeliness, but his qualities as a good sallor man, his pleasing

THE FIGHTING IN LUZON.

How the Volunteers Gained Ground a Malolos-Cavalry After the Robels. Manila, March 29.-The volunteers have again demonstrated their capability, their bravery has been proven, and their prowess the best of the regular troops of the republic With a dash and élan that distinguish ou Western men, the brunt of the fighting has been borne by the troops from the Western States, although due praise must be accorded to the Pennsylvania regiment and its gallant old chief, Col. Hawkins.

Praise must also be accorded to the regulars although the regiments in several cases are composed of recruits. To sum up, all of Uncle Sam's soldiers have covered themselves with glory and defeated a cruel enemy albeit they be semi-savages. Had the fighting of the last few days happened in a country defended by skilled troops, our losses would have been overwhelming. The skilful construction of the trenches, under the guidance and supervision of a Filipino educated as a civil engineer in Belgium, elicited high praise from our officers.

The fighting commenced with an advance from Caloocan on Saturday morning last, March 25, and has continued without intermission. Our troops have fought for ground gained, inch by inch. in many encounters at the bayonet's point. The construction of the trenches was f such a nature that artillery had no effect, and a continuous charge of infantry to clear them of the enemy was the only mode of proof such a nature that artillery had no effect, and a continuous charge of infantry to clear them of the enemy was set going the artillery came into play, and the Fourth Cavalry, mounted partly on the big American horses and partly on native ponies, charged the flying Filipinos with excellent results into the open. Then the Utan Light Artillery guns came into action and scattered shells into the masses that were trying to seek shelter in a clump of trees. The brave men of the South Dakota regiment experienced heavy losses, and their heroic march acrossone of the dismantled railroad bridges is one of the shining episodes of the campaign. In the face of a withering fire from the enemy, they marched until, once on firm ground, a charge with a whoop and shout sent the Filipinos flying for their lives. In this charge they shared the honors with the Kansans, under Col. Funston, and the Nebraskan boys, while the Third United States Artillery fought side by side with these volunteers.

While our loss to date is said to be some 60 killed and 250 wounded, the same is not a very large percentage, when the fact is considered that over 10,000 men were in the line, while the enemy have suffered a loss of at least 2,000. The fields and ditches are full of dead Filipinos. They have lost their best General, Montenegro, and are short of food and ammunition. Our advance lines to-day are within seven miles of Malolos, and despite the report that the flower of the Filipino army are concentrated at that point, it is fully expected that we shall be in possession of the little obscure village, the seat of the Aguinaldo Government, within the next forty-eight hours. While there is no doubt that a most stubborn resistance will be made by the Filipinos army are concentrated at that point, it is fully expected that we shall be in possession of the little obscure village, the seat of the Aguinaldo Government, within the next forty-eight hours. BRIDGEPORT, May 8.-Lieut, Siebs, who kept clothing store here and who commands the achine gun platoon of the Fourth Regiment. C. N. G., was horsewhipped by his wife in Broad street last evening. Before her mar-riage in 1892 Mrs. Siebs was Miss Dorothy Drury of Brooklyn, N. Y. and is said to have inherited from an uncle more than $100,000. Siebs was then a traveiling salesman. Soon after their marriage the couple came to this city and Siebs started in the clothing business. For some time there has been trouble beween them. Last week papers in a divorce petition were drawn by Mrs. Slebs's attorneys charging Siebs with intolerable cruelty, and Mrs. Siebs took charge of the store on Main street. On Saturday Mr. and Mrs. Siebs met, and it was understood that all differences between them had been adjusted. Yesterday, to celebrate the reconciliation, the couple drove to a shore resort at Strat-ford and ordered dinner. During the meal Mrs. Siebs chanced to see in a Sunday paper an account of the relations of her husband and a young woman in Bridgeport. Thereupon she began throwing glasses and crockery at her husband. She broke a large plate glass win-dow and all the crockery and glass on the table, but did not hit Slebs. Another recon-cilitation followed and the couple started for collection followed and the couple started for home.

When they reached a point in Barnum avenue the trouble started again. Siebe ran away, but was captured by his wife and brought back to the carriage. When they reached this city Mrs. Siebs turned from Fairfield avenue into Broad street. In front of the house where the young woman referred to lives she stopped the horse, and, taking the whip, began to chastise her husband. She dropped the reins, and with one hand brought the whip down with a swish, while with her other clinched fist she beat a taitoo on the head of her husband. At almost every stroke of the whip she called out at the top of her voice to the young woman to look upon the proceeding. The young woman did not put in an appearance. Siebs offered no resistance. When Mrs. Siebs had satisfied her anger she dropped the whip, stood up in the carriage, picked her husband up and threw him out head first into the street. Siebs picked himself up and started to go down the street. Mrs. Siebs took her parasoi, followed him into a store and there parasoi, followed him into a store and there broke the parasoi over his head. Then she beat him with her flats.

After the drubbing in the store Siebs called for the carriage and got in with his wife and drove away.

WISHER'S CHURCH NAMED TEMPLE. Option on a House of Worship Secured-All

The Wisher, or Tammany, section of the Mount Olivet African Baptist congregation met for organization in Adelphi Hall, at Fiftysecond street and Seventh avenue, last night The meeting was peaceful except for the rumblings of a bicycle academy overhead, which sorely distressed the Rev. Dr. Wisher and his disciples. They could find nothing, the Rev Mr. Wisher said, in Mr. Flushing's manual that would show how to restore order under just those circumstances.

It was voted that the new church should be called the Baptist Temple, thus commemorating the wanderings of the exiles from Mount Olivet and their resemblance to the wandering he had secured an option on a church about to become vacant in the neighborhood. At Mount Olivet Church the Holloway or Republican faction met. When reporters called there for news a benevolent old lady appeared at the inner door and shoved them away with both hands.

The knock-out for him, the police stopped the mill, and the referee gave the fight te Sweeney. After the contest Sammy Harris, on behalf of Tim Kearns, posted $100 and challenged Sweeney for $500 a side. There was a long delay in choosing a suitable referee. Downey wanted to name the man. but Sweeney held out for a neutral party. Sweeney was handled by John Sullivan and Spike Sullivan, and Downey's handlers were Jack Ryan, Benny Murray, Andy Kelly and James Price. The weight was 132 pounds, at 3 o'clock. Sweeney was an even money shot. They boxed straight Marquis of Queensberry rules. Sweeney made a victous lead as a starter, but Downey ducked. In a hot mix-up Downey knocked Sweeney down. The latter took his time getting up. When Sweeney arose he rushed and gave Downey a terrific beating. He nearly but Jack through the ropes with a right swing. The second round was even faster. They bunched away with all their strength, and Downey's eyes began to puff and show signs of distress.

They fought without let-up in the third round. Downey split Sweeney's left eye open with a swing, and then Sweeney gave Jack a hard pounding. The latter was sent to the boards twice. He was nearly used up at the sound of the gong. The fourth round was a repetition of the preceding ones. Downey received unlimited punishment in the fifth round, but gamely stuck it out. Patsy kept up his unmerelful attack in the sixth round, and the crowd wondered how Downey stood it. Sweeney, despite his steady fighting, did not seem to tire in the seventh round. He punched Downey when and where he liked. Jack recovered somewhat in the eighth round, but was repeatedly staggered with swings.

Downey saved himself by judiclous clinching in the ninth and tenth rounds. Sweeney's fast efforts made him a bit tired in the eleventh round, and Downey trounced him relentlessly. The twellth and thirteenth rounds were equally rapid. Downey receiving the brunt of the gruelling. The gong saved Downey in the fourteenth and fifteenth rounds. Downey seemed to brighten up a bit as the seventeenth round progressed, but a well-directed uppercut laid him low. At this juncture the police stopped the bout.

Two local lads appeared in the preliminary "go." They were Lewis Meyers and Tony Moran, the "Italian champion." The limit was twelve rounds at 118 pounds. Tommy Sullivan was to have been Meyers's opponent. The latter got the decision. Jack Ryan, Benny Murray, Andy Kelly and James Price. The weight was 132 pounds,

ON A SEVENTY-TWO HOUR TRAMP. Peter Hegelman Leads at the End of the First Day's Racing.

Sixteen pedestrians, many of whom have stood the test of long-distance contests, started at I o'clock yesterday afternoon in the Grand Central Palace for a supreme trial of speed and endurance in the seventy-two hour race. Although the struggle will last for six days, the race will escape the provisions of the recent law against six-day races, as the competitors will be on the track only twelve hours each day A stirring race and perhaps new records may be looked for, as all the men who started show an immense improvement in their condition compared with the two races held during the winter months. Hegelman and Guerrero, in whom the principal interest centres, look in whom the principal interest centres, sook in particularly good shape. The race between them promises to be a battle of trainers as well as athletes. Chadsey, who handled Hegelman when he won the recent twenty-four-hour race, has transferred his allegiance to Hegelman's greatest rival and is now looking after Guer-rero, while Jack Hart is attending to the wants greatest rival and is now looking after duer-ero, while Jack Hart is attending to the wants of Hegelman.

When Frank Moran fired the pistol it was evident that the two cracks meant, if possible, to run each other down in the early stages, Hegelman dashed to the front, and, with duer-rero close on his heels, reeled off the first mile in 5 minutes 12 seconds. Guerrero tried hard to hold the German-American, but the latter's speed was too great. Going at a pace that sug-gested a ten-mile race Hegelman covered a little over nine miles and a half in the first hour.

He went through the second hour with only slightly diminished speed. He and Guerrero drew steadily away from the rest of the field. The lender at 3 o clock had covered eighteen miles and four laps, while the "Greaser" was less than haif a mile behind him. Martin, one of the Irish candidates, was then in third place, with a score of sixteen miles. All the rest were bunched within a quarter of a mile except the veterans. Day and Noremac, who were travelling at a slow trot and had less than thirteen miles to their credit. Hegelman had increased his lend on Guerrero to a mile at 4 o clock. The hot pace began to tell on the Mexican and he took several short rests, but Hegelman ran for more than five hours without leaving the track, and at 6 o'clock had 36 miles 10 laps to his credit, an average of more than seven miles an hour. Cox, another of the Irish brigade, gained on the lenders during the third and fourth hours, and at the end of the fifth hour was in third place, with 34 miles 7 laps, less than half a mile behind Guerrero.

The matches took place at the Queen's Club in London, and they attracted much attention from the tennis enthusiasts, as well as the general public, since the entries included some of the strongest players in Great Brit-

The championship singles had an entry of thirteen players, including Champion R. F. Doherty, H. S. Mahony, P. G. Pearson the Oxford champion; A. W. Gore and G. Greville. The champion; was ill and unfortunately had to "scratch" and Pearson was put out in an exciting five set match by Greville in the second round. The semi-finals brought Mahony against Gore again, and he won with less difficulty than at Wimbledon last year, the score being 6-3, 2-6, 8-4, 6-2.

In the final round, Greville met the Irish champion and a battle royal followed, the latter finally pulling out a victory by the harrow margin of 7-5, 6-8, 6-4, 5-7, 6-3. The challenge round brought the Irishman against Dr. W. V. Enves and another heart-breaking struggle after losing the lirst two sets and pulled up even at the end of the fourth. In the deciding set the acore ran up evenly to 4-all, and then Eaves pulled himself together for a final effort and ran out. The score: 6-4, 6-4, 6-8, 3-4, 6-4. Doherty, H. S. Mahony, P. G. Pearson the Ox-ran out. The score: 6-4, 6-4, 6-8, 3-6, 6-4.

In the championship doubles there were six teams entered, including Mahony and Eaves in conjunction. The unexpected happened in this event, and the favorites were beaten in the semi-finals by G. M. Simond and G. A. Caridin, the score being 6-3, 6-4, 6-4 against Eaves and Mahony. In the finals the former were heaten by E. W. Lewis, a veteran covered court expert, and G. Greville, by a score of 6-4, 6-4. 10-8. The famous Doherty brothers, who also hold the all-England championship, were too much for their challengers and Lewis and Greville succumbed to the brothers by 1-7, 6-4, 6-4.

Miss C. Cooper, the English champion, captured first honors in the women's championship singles, but she was beaten in the challenge round, 6-2, 6-4, by Miss Austin, the previous holder. In the mixed doubles, R. F. Doherty and Miss C. Cooper, the previous holders, retained their title by beating G. Greville and Miss Austin, the challengers. by 2-6, 6-3.

The land on which the building stands has been purchased by the Pennsylvania Railrond, and the N. J. Y. C. will have to find other quarters. The members will hold a meeting on next Thursday to decide what to do. Two plans have been suggested. One is to ront quarters in Hoboken and have a small house in Hudson Park, and the other is to consolidate with the Greenville Yacht Club. The club is in a flourishing condition financially, having a fair balance in the treasury. It has been suggested that the New York Y. C. should take the old house, put it on a float and use it as a station which the club may establish on Staten Island.

The flagshit Sachem will go into commission this month. She is now at Port Jefferson and is almost ready. Commodore and Mrs. Adams will cruise about these waters on the yacht. For the opening regatta on Decoration Day the Regatta Committee has chartered the tug Fulton Market for the use of club members. The grounds around the house at Sea Gate have been laid out artistically. The paths have been filed and the beds stocked with shrubs and flower plants given by Vice-Commodore Whitlock. The latter's schooner Ramona is anchored off the clubhouse. She is nainted white and looks very well. A new float for the use of members is to be placed off the bulkhead. It will be a large one, and will be supplied with seats, together with an awning, to shelter those waiting for boats from the heat of the sun.

"Sir Thomas Lipton," says the Yachling World, "who will be the central figure of British yachting during the coming season, started his salling modestive enough, wrestling with the difficulties of managing a lugsall skiff off the Avrshire coast. It is a kind of sailing that does not look very impressive to a spectator, but in brezz weather it has excitement enough for the man at the tiller. The skiffs are built somewhat scant as to freeboard and straight in the sheer. When the wind is at all fresh and squally the steersman has work enough for every hand and eye which he possesses. There are charm and excitement in the sport apart from anything which can be obtained on a decked-in yacht, where an extra foot of water on the deck makes no difference, and the memory of a stiff thresh under such circumstances lives for a long time.

"Sir Thomas has apparently not yet forgotten his experiences in this direction, for he has just sent to the Clyde an order for an open sailing boat of the same size and somewhat similar type to those skiffs. The large lugsalls are ballasted generally with geological specimens taken from the shore, and as this is practically impossible in a steam racht, the boat will be fitted with a centreboard. It will be built of cedar and handsomely appointed."

The Columbia Nearly Plated.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., May 8.—The Columbia is nearly covered with plating and will probably he all closed in about the middle of this week. Only ten plates are now to be attached to the frames. The stern piece, which is all in one piece, has been cut from a plate and will be put in place immediately. It resembles closely the stern of the Defender, having the same slant inward and downward. On the interior of the yacht the greater part of the work of putting in the steel strips and braces, as well as the bulkheads, is well along, and the work of deck planking is now under way. The planking will be of white pine, two inches thick and three inches wide, the seams to be filled with marine glue, after which it will be planed and saudpapered.

The theory that the sides of the yacht above the water lines will be painted still prevails. The wooden bulkheads are well along in the carpenter shop and will shortly be in place. They showl a panelled effect, but it is learned that the style is for stiffening purposes wholly. The wood is of butternut. One of the anchors has arrived. It is of galvanized iron, with a stock five feet long.

The new steel mast is about two-thirds completed. The pig mainsail is nearly finished. slant inward and downward. On the interior

The new clubhouse of the New York Model Yacht Club on Bowerp Bay was informally opened resterday. The principal event of the day was the launch of the new first-class sloop built by William E. Blauveil, a member of the club. The craft was christened The Dot. She is a first-class boat, sloop rigged, and her dimensions are 45 inches load water line, 65 inches over all, 114 inches beam, and has a fix seel. Sir Thomas Lipton, according to the Field, has stated that he will be unable to take the Shamrock to Belfast Lough null after the America's Cup races. "This," says the Field, "will be a great disappointment to the Belfast, Bangor and Carricatergus people, as they regard the Shamrock still as an Irishbuilt vessel; but, alsa! the only things Irish about now are her name and the fighting flag. However, if she sails home from New York with the America's Cup on board, great will be the enthusiasm about Belfast Lough."

Change of Dates for the Women's Cham pionship Under Discussion.

A number of prominent players who expect to figure in the women's championship of the U. S. G. A. this year, which is scheduled to be played at the Philadelphia Country Club on Oct 10 to 14, are anxious that the event should be postponed a week, in order to avoid any possible chance of a conflict with the international yacht races for the America's Cup. This series is scheduled to begin on Oct. 3, the best three out of five races, and, as the past records of the international race show that on account of postponements due to lack of wind it has usually taken two weeks to settle the issue, the women fear that unless their championship is put back a clash in the dates will prevent many from entering. Secretary Kerr of the U. S. G. A. has the matter under consideration, and he has communicated with the Philadelphia Country Club.
